

A "SOUND, SAFE CURRENCY."

We would like the Republican press of Nevada, which is constantly telling us its party is a Silver party, to read the following from the Philadelphia Ledger, one of the leading Republican papers of the East and one of the highest in authority on stating party measures. A "sound, safe currency" in their parlance means gold. It says:

"Both the great political organizations are divided upon the currency question, but they are divided with a difference. An overwhelming majority of the Republican party have not only opinions, but unalterably fixed convictions of the necessity of maintaining its traditional policy for an honest, safe currency; in the Democratic Party the majority is upon the other side of the question, especially in the West and in those States in which the Democracy is numerically the strongest. In the Middle and Eastern States the Republicans are virtually solid for sound, safe money, and generally intelligent Democrats sympathize with them."

"It is evident under the circumstances that the very best that can be expected from the Democratic National Convention of next year is a straddling currency platform and a compromise candidate to stand upon it, and it is possible, even probable, that both platform and candidate will represent free and unlimited silver coinage at a ratio of 16 to 1. Upon such a platform the Democracy will divide, and against such a candidate a large proportion of Democratic voters will be arrayed at the polls."

"Such being the case, it is as clear as the sun at noonday that the Republican party's platform and candidate must be of the most radical character; that both shall stand for an honest, stable currency. There are comparatively few Republicans who are not advocates of sound, safe money; there are comparatively many Democrats who will contend for a debased, inflated silver currency. If the Republican Convention should adopt a radical platform and adopt a radical candidate, it will be almost certain to receive the Electoral votes of every Eastern State and of some Western Commonwealths, as it will get not only the pretty nearly solid vote of its own adherents, but a very large number of the votes of Democrats who are opposed to free silver."

"The Republican Party, putting resolutely aside all thoughts of a compromise platform and candidate, must take the field with an uncompromising candidate upon a platform of sound, safe money, as that road only will lead them to certain victory. The common demand of the Democracy for a dishonest, unsafe currency creates the opportunity of triumph for the Republican party; it is too great a one to be sacrificed to a straddling platform and a compromise candidate, no matter who he may be."

The Stanford University.

Since the filing of the suit by the Government against the Stanford estate the funds have been tied up and Mrs. Stanford has supported the Stanford University out of her private purse, paying its expenses of $1,000 a day. This has exhausted over half her fortune. If the Government suit is not soon settled the school will have to close, for a few months more will entirely exhaust Mrs. Stanford's fortune.

President Jordan has limited the number of students to 1,100, and in consequence the next freshman class will be small.

Mrs. Stanford feels very bitter toward the people of California for their attitude toward the big Stanford estate, upon which the prosperity of the school is dependent. She declares that if the doors of the institution are once closed they will never be reopened in California. She says she will then rebuild the university in some other State where it will be more appreciated.

The above is a dispatch from New York City. The people of California do not take much stock in the University, because it was given to them with such a grand flourish on the part of the donor. The people of California realized that the amount had been stolen from them by Stanford and that they had been bled for every cent the place cost. It was like robbing your neighbor's hen roost and then inviting him to a chicken dinner, at which he got a portion of his own fowl's back.

Durrant has insisted all along that he can disprove all charges against him in an hour. Yet his attorneys ask a postponement of the trial until July and also want a change of venue. The prosecution is ready for trial at anytime.

Now is the season of the year when you lay in your supply of wall-paper. John G. Fox has some new designs and such a variety on hand that you cannot help be satisfied.
